

“A helping hand came at a critical juncture. Now I’m giving back.”

Colleen Kinerk, '74, a Seattle-based attorney, graduated from Seattle University because of the scholarship support of a university donor. “One person’s generosity changed my life,” Colleen says, “and now I can do that for someone else.” Colleen’s giving motto: “Every gift counts. Even small gifts grow with time.”

Giving to Seattle University strengthens its mission to educate the whole person and empower leaders for a just and humane world. A bequest or gift is an expression of caring and belief in our Jesuit values.

For planned giving assistance, contact Bob Turner, Director of Planned Giving, at (206) 296-6103 or bturner@seattleu.edu.

www.seattleu.edu

SEATTLE
UNIVERSITY

Where education means more.

“Seattle University gave me a life career. Now I’m giving to others.”

Seattle University had just three buildings when Donald Hoba graduated with a chemistry degree in 1951. Yet even with a small academic program, the school changed the shape of his career path. “Seattle University allowed me to build a career beyond what my degree said I could do,” he explains. “A well-rounded education changed my life, and that’s why I give back to support the career paths of others.”

Giving to Seattle University strengthens its mission to educate the whole person and empower leaders for a just and humane world. A bequest or gift is an expression of caring and belief in our Jesuit values.

For planned giving assistance, contact Bob Turner, Director of Planned Giving, at (206) 296-6103 or bturner@seattleu.edu.

www.seattleu.edu

SEATTLE
UNIVERSITY

Where education means more.

“My reasons for giving to SU are based upon my faith.”

Mimi Krsak, '73, '79, a teacher, included Seattle University in her will for two reasons. Her family believes in giving back, regardless of income. And she and her family believe in the mission of Seattle University, especially its sense of service and justice. “Giving back is important for everyone,” Mimi says. “My parents taught me—and I’ve always believed—that God responds with more generosity than we are able to give.”

Giving to Seattle University strengthens its mission to educate the whole person and empower leaders for a just and humane world. A bequest or gift is an expression of caring and belief in our Jesuit values.

For planned giving assistance, contact Bob Turner, Director of Planned Giving, at (206) 296-6103 or bturner@seattleu.edu.

www.seattleu.edu

SEATTLE
UNIVERSITY

Where education means more.